LOGO & IDENTITY PRESENTATION

The mark,
the rules,
the merchandise.

Lord of Gyms & Fitness · Kathmandu, Nepal

PREPARED FOR PARTNER REVIEW · 2026

What is in this document

01 The concept

Where the mark comes from and what it means

02 The primary mark

The finished logo in its master form

03 Construction

Geometry, proportions, clear space, minimum size

04 The logo family

Stacked, horizontal, badge and avatar lockups

05 Colour & misuse

Approved colourways and what must never happen

06 Merchandise

Apparel, headwear, accessories, equipment, signage, digital

Three ideas, one mark

01

A monogram, not a picture

Three letters, drawn as geometry rather than typed. It stays legible on a signboard at 20 metres and on a phone avatar at 20 pixels — the two places a gym brand actually lives.

02

The O is a weight plate

The centre letter is built as a plate: an even ring with a bored centre. The fitness reference sits inside the letterform instead of being stuck on beside it.

03

The bar runs through it

A single horizontal channel cuts every letter at the same height. Read one way it is a stencil break; read another it is the bar passing through the plate.

No clip-art barbells. The equipment is built into the letters, so the mark still works when it is embroidered, engraved, or 12 mm wide.

The master lockup

How to use it

- This is the default. Use it unless the space forces something else.
- Always reproduce from the master file — never redraw or retype it.
- The gap between the mark and the wordline is fixed. Do not adjust it.
- White on Tar Road is the preferred pairing.

Drawn on a grid, not by eye

Proportions

Stem weight	1 unit
Cap height	3.6 units
Plate diameter	3.6 units
Bar channel	0.38 units
Letter spacing	0.5–0.6 units

Every dimension is a multiple of the stem weight, so the mark can be rebuilt at any scale without drifting.

Clear space and minimum size

Rules of placement

- Keep clear space of one stem weight (X) on all four sides. Nothing enters that zone — no text, no photo edge, no border.
- Below the minimum sizes, drop the wordline and use the monogram on its own.
- On embroidery, never go under 45 mm wide — the bar channel closes up.
- On engraving, use the single-colour version with no wordline.

One mark, four lockups

HORIZONTAL · “LOG FITNESS”

For wide spaces: website headers, email signatures, banners, vehicle sides and the front of a signboard where height is limited.

SOLID BADGE

REVERSED BADGE

BADGE · SOLID AND REVERSED

For patches, embroidery, stickers, membership cards and anywhere the mark needs a container of its own.

The small end: icon and avatar

Where this version does the work

- Instagram, TikTok and Facebook profile pictures
- The watermark on every member workout clip
- App icon and digital check-in screen
- Membership card and QR tag

The monogram alone is the version most people will see most often — which is exactly why it was designed first.

Approved colourways

TAR ROAD GROUND
PRIMARY

WHITE GROUND
PRIMARY INVERTED

ELEGANT GREY GROUND
SECONDARY

SINGLE COLOUR
STAMP / ENGRAVE

Two colours, no exceptions

Tar Road 8245 carries the brand; Elegant Grey 8232 supports it. White exists only as a ground or a reverse.

Any other colour — including a gradient, a metallic, or a seasonal special — is outside the identity and must not be produced.

For a single-colour process (engraving, embossing, one-plate screen print) use solid black or solid white and drop the wordline.

What must never happen

Why it matters

Every one of these has happened to a local brand within a year of launch, usually from a printer or a sign shop working from a screenshot.

Give suppliers the master files and this page. If a proof comes back looking like any panel on the left, reject it.

The voice around the mark

LOG

DISPLAY · heavy geometric sans, wide tracking, caps only

Train hard. Wear it louder.

BODY · clean humanist sans for all running text and signage copy

Headlines

Caps, heavy weight, tracked out 6–10%

Body copy

Sentence case, regular weight, generous line height

Labels & tags

Caps, small, tracked out 15% — used on equipment and signage

Never

Script, outlines, drop shadows, or a second display face

Apparel — the core tee

TAR ROAD TEE · CHEST PRINT

Heavy cotton, matte white screen print. The everyday piece and the highest-volume item in the range.

ELEGANT GREY TEE · SMALL MARK

Monogram at the chest with the secondary lockup below — the quieter option for members who don't want a billboard.

Hoodie and headwear

TAR ROAD HOODIE · OVERSIZED

Matte finish, drop shoulder, chest lockup. The highest-margin apparel piece and the one members wear outside the gym.

STRUCTURED CAP · EMBROIDERED

Front-panel embroidery, white on Tar Road. Never below 45 mm wide — under that the bar channel closes up in stitch.

Accessories — the lifting belt

LEATHER LIFTING BELT · BLIND EMBOSS

The monogram pressed into the leather with no ink at all. Single-colour version, wordline dropped.

The premium anchor

A belt costs a fraction of one machine and carries the mark into every serious lifter's kit bag — including the ones who train somewhere else.

Blind embossing needs no ink, never peels, and reads as expensive. It is the clearest possible signal that this is not a promo giveaway.

Start with one small run and pre-orders while demand is still being tested.

Accessories — bag and bottle

TRAINING DUFFEL · SIDE PANEL

Large mark on the side panel. It travels across the city on a shoulder twice a day.

SHAKER BOTTLE

Sits on a desk all day.

Everyday visibility

These two are not fashion items — they are the ones a member carries whether or not they are thinking about the brand.

Both are low cost, high frequency, and both are advertising that a member paid us to run.

Keep the first order small, sample before each drop, and reorder only what sells.

On the equipment itself

Engraved, not stickered

Plates, dumbbells and machine uprights carry the monogram as a precision engraving in the single-colour version — no wordline, no ink, nothing to peel off in year two.

This is the detail members photograph without being asked, and the one thing a competitor cannot replicate by buying the same equipment catalogue.

Plates & dumbbells	Engraved monogram, 40 mm
Machine uprights	Etched mark at eye height
Benches & racks	Tar Road matte upholstery

Signage

Illuminated, reversed

White mark on a Tar Road panel, back-lit. The bar channel reads clearly at night and from a moving vehicle, which is where most people in Kathmandu will first see the brand.

The wordline sits below at a fixed ratio. Below 1.2 m panel width, drop it and run the monogram alone.

Digital and social

The watermark

Bottom-right, white at 85% opacity, one clear-space unit from both edges. Applied to every clip a member or trainer posts — thousands of impressions a month that cost nothing to run.

The avatar

Monogram only, centred, on Tar Road. Identical across every platform so the brand is recognised in a feed before the name is read.

What comes with the mark

Master artwork

Vector master in every approved lockup and colourway, in the formats printers, embroiderers and sign fabricators ask for.

Small-size set

Avatar, app icon and video watermark, exported ready to upload.

This document

The rules — construction, clear space, minimum size, colour, misuse — so the brand survives contact with suppliers.

Merchandise pack

Placement and size specifications for tee, hoodie, cap, belt, bottle, duffel, plate engraving and signage.

A logo is what you show. An identity is what survives ten suppliers, three cities and five years.
